7 JESSICA LEE, individually and on behalf of
8 a class of similarly situated individuals,

No. C 11-0043 RS

9 ORDER RE CLASS NOTICE

10 Plaintiff,

11 v.

12 STONEBRIDGE LIFE INSURANCE
13 COMPANY, et al.,

14 Defendants.
15 _____ /

17 Plaintiff has brought a motion seeking to resolve disputes between the parties regarding the 18 form of notices to be provided to the class in this matter. In the course of briefing, the parties have 19 reached agreement on some matters, and plaintiff has incorporated some of the changes defendant
20 Stonebridge sought into new proposed forms of notice. Plaintiff has also committed to meeting and 21 conferring with Stonebridge regarding the content of the website and information to be provided
22 through the toll-free telephone number, and is hereby ordered to do so.

23 The parties continue to disagree whether it is appropriate to use the term "spam" in the 24 notices to describe the text messages at issue. Because the term "unsolicited" is easily understood
25 and less potentially prejudicial, the notices shall employ it in lieu of the term "spam."

26 While Stonebridge may be correct that it generally is appropriate to use only the class
27 definition in banners and notice headlines, in this instance plaintiff's proposal to reference the "$100

1 wal-mart gift cards" is justified. Although the class is defined more broadly, which may have any
2 number of legal consequences, there is no prejudice to defendants arising from plaintiff's proposal,
3 and it is more likely to provide meaningful notice to any class members who did receive text
4 messages regarding such gift cards.

5 Stonebridge has the better argument, however, that using its name in the website domain
6 name and elsewhere to describe this litigation is inappropriate. Not only is Stonebridge not the sole
7 defendant, its name did not appear in the alleged text messages. Accordingly, some form of phrase
8 "Lee Text Message" or "Lee Unsolicited Text Message" should be used for the domain name, to 9 identify the administrator, and wherever else appropriate, in lieu of "Stonebridge Text Message" or 10 "Stonebridge Spam."

11 Although the remaining changes sought by Stonebridge are in themselves not objectionable,
12 it has not shown that they represent a meaningful improvement over plaintiff's proposal.
13 Accordingly, with the additional changes required by this order, plaintiff's proposed forms of notice
14 are approved.
